ALFALFA SEEDING.

August Seeding Reduces Danger of Weeds Choking Young Plants.

A few years ago it was supposed that alfalfa was a plant which could be successfully grown only by irrigation. We find today, however, that it can be grown on varying conditions of soil and climate from the bottom lands of the Red river in Louisiana and the Yazoo delta of the Mississippi, in the south, to Minnesota, Wisconsin, New York, even as far north as Ottawa and southern Quebec, and from the Atlantic to the Pacific oceans.

Except in the southern states, spring seeding was the usual practice, but it is now found that fall seeding has advantages also for the north, and August or early fall seeding has proved satisfactory in many cases. However, toward the most northern limit of alfalfa growing the season may be too short for the plant to get sufficiently well started with fall seeding to survive the winter. Spring seeding is still, on the whole, the more general practice.

The young alfalfa plant is one of the weakest among farm crops, grows slowly, is easily checked or killed by weeds or by unfavorable conditions of the soil, weather or treatment for some time after starting from the seed. The young plantlet, slender and delicate, is well shown in the cut. When the stems are cut or grazed off the stalk dies down to the very base, and new buds are produced on the upper part or crown of the root. The plants do not reach full growth until the third year. The crown of each plant by that time produces a great many stems and forms a strong tuft of excellent fodder. Owing to the smallness of the plants the first year farmers are sometimes disappointed at the appearance of the crop, but if, when the seed has been sown broadcast, one plant can be saved to every five or six inches the stand will be thick enough. A large amount of alfalfa is seeded in drills.

Alfalfa seeded in the spring needs little care after the first season more than to mow the weeds a few times during the summer to prevent the weeds from seeding and to keep them from smothering the young alfalfa plants. It is well to mow the field two or three times during the season, but the growth of weeds and alfalfa should not be cut too close to the ground. It seems to be true that when alfalfa has become well established frequent close cutting benefits the plant and causes it to grow more vigorously, but this is not true of the young, tender plants.

Fall seeding is advantageous in order to get the start of the weeds and gives a comparatively clean crop of hay. The fall seeded alfalfa needs no care in the fall. The full growth of plants and weeds should be left as a winter covering. The next season the alfalfa may be regularly cut for hay and with a good catch will often produce three or four cuttings the first year, yielding three or more tons of good hay per acre, although on foul land the hay is apt to be a little weedy the first season.

The fall seeding has the advantage of the spring seeding in that the land returns a fair crop the first season after sowing, whereas with the spring seeding the alfalfa is not likely to make sufficient growth to produce a profitable crop of hay the first season; also the weeds will usually be so abundant as to prevent the use of the first season's cuttings for hay even should the alfalfa make sufficient growth.

Summer Feed For Cows.

In late May and through much of June pastures are flush and grasses very tender and succulent. The grass is at times "washy," and hay or other dry feed is then necessary in the ration to correct the tendency to rankness in the milk and an inferior butter product. Then comes usually a time when grass is in best estate, and the cows may need little else, though a small quantity of other feed is not amiss in the manger. Finally arrive the hot winds and dry pastures, and silage comes to its own. Some good dairy-men claim that cows never do better than when at this period of the pastures the cows are kept on silage and a little grazing. He cuts the best of the meadow grass and feeds in the manger at evening and turns the cows on the pasture early in the morning while it is still dewy and cool. Later in the season he cuts oats and afterward green corn instead of the grass and feeds both night and morning.

CHINA'S AWAKENING.

Wonderful Improvements in Peking in the Past Two Years.

A competent authority on things Chinese states that during the last two years China has made more real advancement than in the previous millennium. That his judgment is sound is apparent to those who enjoy the vantage point of a residence in Peking. It has long been predicted that changes would be surprising in their speed, but the most sanguine had not hoped for what is taking place.

In passing through Peking the streets seem to be the most striking phenomenon. Three years ago there seemed little hope that the black mud and the disgusting sights and stenches would ever give place to anything better. The board that had been appointed to repair the streets was considered to have an Augean task and was the butt of many facetious remarks. Now the broad thoroughfares are fast being converted into handsome avenues. The central portion, a strip of about seven yards in width, is being well macadamized with the aid of steam rollers. This is flanked on each side by shallow drains of brickwork, a row of trees, an unpaved strip of five yards in good repair, then a curbed sidewalk of varying width, cheaply cemented with pounded lime and earth. The building line has been straightened, necessitating the rebuilding of many shops the rehabilitation of which is in keeping with the rest. Long forgotten sewers have been reopened and places of convenience erected, the use of which is made compulsory. Innumerable unsightly sheds which have occupied half the roadway are being removed, forever, it is hoped, and the squatters have sought other fields in which to ply their trades. The new roadways are guarded by uniformed police in their sentry boxes and kept in order by numerous laborers. Fine telephone poles, strung with countless copper wires, replace the tony turrey line of the last few years. The telephone is no longer a curiosity, but is fast becoming a necessity to progressive business men.—Joseph Franklin Griggs in Century.
